9. Session wise inputs with photos

Dr.K.Vijayakumar, Convenor of the workshop delivered the welcome address by mentioning this workshop meets the prevailing needs of the language and linguistics learners and tutors.

Dr.A.Senthilkumar, Dean – Academic and Autonomous, MCET honoured the chief guest..

Dr.P.Govindasamy, Principal, MCET presided over the function with an iota of citation about necessitate of journal writing and publications. He welcomed the resource person and insisted the participants to utilize this opportunity and make a constructive learning through interaction.

Ms.R.Vidhya, workshop coordinator introduced the resource person to the audience. The plenary session 1 commenced with a brainstorming quizzes that buzzed participants and the session become to be on livewire. The resource person kindled the thought process of participants with the seven queries that revolves around the research article writing. This ice breaking session helped to acquaint students with workshop content and expectations. On other hand, it made the communication among the participants and accelerated the comfort level of participants. The queries introduced new jargons of journal publication and article writing such as desk rejection, predatory journals, blue literature, graphic literature and petro studies, He introduced the emerging topics in literature and language which made all participants to jot down the titles as it a pool of reservoir for the Research Scholars (RS).

The vital resources and reference have been disseminated throughout the workshop such as flood of job opportunities in recent studies, e- resources for abstracts, Research app, twitter sites regarding academic exploration and ranking of journals, Jstor and Proquest. Every plenary session is a blend of interaction and discussion mode that made participants to be on vigilant mode. The workshop winds up with a certificate distribution by the resource person, workshop convener and Dr.B.Saravanakumar, Programme Coordinator, Science and Humanities. Ms.V.Arunadevi, Assistant Professor/ SS proposed vote of thanks.
